UNITED NATIONS, New York --- Secretary-General Ja-vier Pérez de Cuéllar said Friday that he had been authorized by the Security Council to visit Iran and Iraq as soon as possible to seek implementation of a July 20 Security Council call for a cease-fire in the Gulf war.

He told reporters he would visit Iran first. No dates have yet been set, but the United Nations chief said he expected to begin his mission around the middle or end of next week, returning to New York on Sept. 16 or 17. The secretary-general emerged from consultations and said Iran and Iraq would be asked to "cease all hostilities during my mission in the area."

Mr. Honecker will meet with Chancellor Kohl and other top West German officials on Monday and Tuesday during the official portion of his visit, necording to a program made public this week.

Arms Office Director

By David K. Shipler New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - Three candidates are being considered to succeed Kenneth L. Adelman as direcor of the Arms Cootrol and Disarmament Agency when he leaves the post pert month according to Reagan administration officials.

They named Paul H. Nitze and Edward L. Rowny, special advisers on arms control to President Ronald Reagan and to Secretary of State George P. Shultz, and Ronald F. Lehman, who heads the American team negotiating a strategic arms reduction treaty.

A White House official denied a report published Thursday in The Washington Times that Mr. Reagan already had chosen Mr. Nitze.

The directorship of the arms agency has carried little policymaking authority in the government, which has been divided over arms control. But whoever replaces Mr. Adeiman is expected to emerge as the leading spokesman for the prospective treaty on elimination af intermediate range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Soviet and American negotiators are near agreement on most key provisions, and a final pact is expected to be ready to sign by the end of November. Then it would be submitted for ratification by the Senate, where the new director of the arms control agency would presumably be called on to provide expert testimony.

The State Department is said to favor Mr. Nitze, 80, who is a hardheaded supporter of arms control and is seen as the most credible choice by centrists in the Senate. Mr. Nitze also is said to be the favorite of some White House officials who want Mr. Reagan to leave his mark in history with a treaty.

Mr. Rowny, 70, a retired lieutenant general in the army, is the choice of conservatives. One official said that nine conservative sen-Hewitt, an executive of CBS News, ators, led by James A. McClure, Republican of Idaho, sent Mr. Rea-

American talks on direct communications links, as deputy assistant secretary of defense for Strategic Forces Policy and as a staff member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

gap can be explained by differences in such factors as education and work experience, the hureau said. Women are more than three times as likely to have had interruptions in their work history, it said. The Ceosus Bureau found "large differences" in the earnings of men and women even when it focused on people who had had no ioterruptions in their working ca-reers. Women with a continuous work history earned, on the average, 69 percent of what men received when they worked continuously.

The World Shaking Book for Mankind "In the Light of Truth"

The Grail Message by Abd-ru-shin

In these crucial times the help of the Creator flows with a power and abundance beyond description. Drawing from the Pare Source of Eternal Truth, Abd-ru-shin has brought the World the Saving Revelation. Among all books of spiritual content this Work takes the supreme place, and provides the answer to all our questions, problems and fears. From the same Origin as the true Message of Christ, this Revelation will rush over the Earth like a powerfully purifying and at the same time invigorating stream. Its all-embracing vastness, its sheer vitality and fullness, make any attempt to classify it unavailing. Words cannot express what is accessible to the intuitive perception alone. One may only approach this Message in humility and thankfulness for such

The Author writes: "I wish to fill the gaps which have so far always remained unanswered in the souls of men, and which never leave any serious thinker in peace, if he honestly seeks the Truth."

A Late Spring in Japan

Japan's azaleas blossomed late this year and are straggling. In the early months, gross national product and industrial productico were stagnant or falling, and unemployment rose. Domestie demand picked up, but not enough to offset weaker net exports. This is not a good mixture for a country that is supposed to be playing a major role in the adjustment of the world's payments imbalances --- the huge contrasts between the West German and Japanese surpluses and the American deficit, along with the inability of Third World debtors to find expanding markets for their exports. Last Saturday in this newspaper we criticized West Germany for inaction. Most commentators prefer to pick on Japan. Is this justified?

There are signs of a belated spring. Since May, unemployment has been falling in Japan and output has risen. The foreign surplus, though still an enormous $7 billion to $8 billion a month, may be turning around. The physical volume of exports is falling, with imports rising, though the automatic effects of the stronger yen have been attenuated as Japanese exporters carve into their fat profit margins and act to improve efficiency. If a new oil crisis does not push the yen down and the dollar up again, revaluation will shrink export profits enough to deter Japanese exporters. There are already signs of this as more operations are being moved to countries where production costs are cheaper. This benefits the rest of the world: Brand names remain Japanese, but the labor producing them does not. The result is an easing of strains over balance of payments. But exchange rates can do only part of the trick. Changes in the domestic demand of creditor and debuor are crucial. Yet the signs that Japan is increasing its spending faster than the United States remain hazy.

Unlike West Germany, Japan has not resolutely refused to stimulate demand. In May it promised a 6 trillion yen ($42.6 billion) boost from the budget, equivalent to a sizable 1.5 percent of GNP. About a quarter of this will come from personal tax cuts and a third from greater spending by the central government. The rest, hopefully, will come from the response of the private construction industry to financial guarantees and subsidies, and enhanced local government spending.

But the haze persists. The tax cut seems likely in be offset by an equivalent cut in the tax privileges accorded to private savers. No one can guess what this will produce - a much hoped-for drop in total savings? The same high savings with less tax relief, which would be deflationary? Or some mixture in between? Higher government spending may be slow to take effect, and the reactions of local governments and private builders to the more indirect incentives are uncertain. Much of the expansionary effect could be negated by an even faster rise in land prices.

Japan has far to go before its appropriate role as a catalyst is assured. It is taking the first steps, but forecasts of recovery trade on fine margins. Japan's need today is to interpret its vague promises constructively, not to negate them by delay or new deflationary measures next year. Skepticism about Tokyo's policy remains in order -- not to beat on Japan, but to boost it. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE

Bee Dung, Nothing More

As every reader of Washington memoirs knows, government has two castes; bureaucrats who endlessly churn out red tape, and political appointees who daringly cut through it. The case of yellow rain, set out in the fall issue of Foreign Policy, demolishes this myth. It proves bow embarrassingly astray political appointees can go when they ignore routine procedure. In 1981, Alexander Haig, then secretary of state, announced that the United States had physical evidence of chemical warfare in Southeast Asia, Based on interviews with refugees, and the finding of toxin in a single sample of yellow rain, the State Department accused the Soviet Union of helping allies in Southeast Asia conduct chemical warfare, in violation of solemn treaties.

At first, only one voice was raised in question. By persistent inquiry, Matthew Meselson, a Harvard biologist, developed another explanation: Yellow rain is the excrement of jungle bees. It is yellow from digested pollen grains, and it rains down from swarms of bees too high to be seen. His theory turns out to be exactly right. The government's own studies, still unpublished. prove that the source is bees, not bombs.

crous a position? From documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, Mr. Meselson and his colleagues Julian Robinson and Jeanne Guillemin began to focus on Richard Burt, then a senior State Department official. Before the first detection of toxin could be confirmed, and against the advice of lower-ranking officials, he pressed to release the information, writing to General Haig of "our strategy for securing the maximum impact from this issue."

For the sake of a quick propaganda victory, these two men rushed onto public record with an extreme accusation. As the bureaucracy methodically went through the checks that should have been done in the first place, that position became preposterous. The army's Chemical Systems Laboratory spent a whole year learning how to ire accurately the toxins that a contract laboratory claimed to have detected. It found no toxin in 80 samples. Defense laboratories in Britain, France and Sweden find no toxin in any sample. Meanwhile, the U.S. Embassy in Thailand, to improve on the quality of testimony about yellow rain by Hmong refugees, repeatedly asked for more professional interviewers. They arrived in 1983 and spent two years questioning witnesses, including those who had given the most striking earlier testimony of chemical attack. These witnesses explained they were only repeating hearsay. Part of the administration case for yellow rain rested on secret intelligence intercepts that confirmed the dates of attack alleged by the refugees. But oo re-interview, the refugees could not agree on dates because the Hmong measure time by seasons, not days. iasco is so e government still cannot bear to admit to it. Both State and the White House still say they have no reason to question that yellow rain is a chemical warfare agent. Mr. Burt, now the ambassador in Bonn, explains he wanted the story out quickly "to stop the killing." But the bees were not killing anyone. The credible account comes from the meticulous studies conducted by the bureaucracy. Yellow rain is bee dung. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS — Mikhail Gorbachev's program and its potential meaning for the West have released the damper on geopolitical speculation. These new bursts of analytical effort are all to the good. They make people who are concerned about policy stop and think, and examine assumptions. A lot of it is far out, based on dubious generalities such as a surge of the Germans to reunificatico and nationalism, anti-Americanism in Western Europe deriving from overdependence on the United States, a triumph of American isolationism.

There is a listle something in all of this, but not every wisp of cloud on the horizon is a gathering storm. The speculation is excessively alarmist and leads in dangerous recommendations: to phase out the North Atlantic Treaty Organization soon because it is about to collapse, to let the West Germans go nuclear and fend for themselves.

In part, this frenetic reasoning stems from a false supposition that the Reagan administration's anti-Communist crusade has become an American constant. Not even the Reagan White House has been constant about it, however, continuing to improve relations with China and preparing new arms control treaties with Moscow even as old ones are undermined. The next administration is likely to spit less fire.

In part, the reasoning projects Mikhail Gorba-chev's impact and intentions too far ahead. There are still too many unknowns to draw conclusions about Soviet foreign policy and its effect on the world America will face.

What can be seen are the fundamental changes in succeeding generations since World War H, and the direction they set for the future. They do suggest an ultimate chance for undoing the partition of Europe and replacing the Cold War with a Europe-wide security system. In the first postwar generation, containment worked, and with recovery the Soviet threat to Western Europe receded. There is no longer any political, economic or social threat to the West from the East. What remains is military.

In the second generation, Eastern Europe began In the second generation, Eastern Europe began to review and regain consciousness of national and European identity. Soviet domination remains, but over an increasingly diverse group of distinct states. Moscow's efforts to homogenize and Russi-fy its new European empire have failed completely. In Jess than a decade of détente, East and West Europeans breached many barriers to human and cultural contact imposed by the Iron Curtain.

Now the third postwar generation is under way, and it too is bringing important developments in Eastern Europe. Where there are reform-minded regimes, whether pushed from below as in Poland or decreed from above as in Hungary, they are receiving Moscow's support instead of its condemnation. Where leaders oppose reform, they are tolerated in a way Moscow never before offered challengers to its line. Mr. Gorbachev cannot afford upheaval in the bloc; it would bring him down. Ironically, cling-ing to the old Soviet line as Moscow now changes brings new autonomy to the Eastern states. Ench Honecker of East Germany is a clear case.

I'LL BET YOURE

This could lead to a fourth stage as a modernizing Soviet Union seeks a more stable base than force for relations with its diversifying allies. The Finnish statesman Max Jacobson has glimpsed possibilities in what he calls the "turning point in Finland." He notes that Soviet leaders now speak of Finland as "a good neighbor" and mean it. "Do they have a better one?" be asks tartly. The Finns are confident now that Moscow respects their independence as they respect Soviet security needs.

Mr. Jacobson argues that what he calls "the success of Soviet foreign policy" with Finland could gradually become a model for its constipated relations with Eastern Europe.

The "Europeanizatico of Europe," which means overcoming artificial partition, must pass through the East in come peacefully. NATO is essential as a stabilizer, above all for Germany but in fact for both halves of Europe, until this process is complete. Even the Soviets now say their call for "dissolving blocs" is "a political slogan, not current politics." Only when all these stages have been passed can the ending of alliances be contemplated. It may or may not take another three generations, but the stages cannot be skipped without great peril. The last one will not be the last in history either, but it will be a different world.

Yes to National Testing

In the late 1960s, a new kind of national test began to be given in American schoolchildren. Called the National Assessment of Educational Progress, it differed from other tests not so much in what it sought to measure as in how it expressed the results. Instead of the usual percentiles that describe how groups compare, the assessment set out to describe what they actually knew. How many could answer this civics question, how many solve that problem in math, how many write a grammatical letter?

That seemingly innocent idea ran into fierce resistance. State school officials especially said it could lead to a national curricnhum in violation of the tradition of local control. Their critics said that what they really feared was exposure and accountability, but to a considerable extent the superintendents prevailed. The tests were authorized, but the testing organization was permitted in report the results only in regional terms, blurring their usefulness. Now there is a move to sharpen the reporting. The number of children tested would be increased to create valid samples in, and allow results to be reported for, each state. The list of subjects tested would be enlarged. The proposal, which has gained broad back-ing in Washington, reflects nationwide interest in performance standards for the schools. State school officials are no longer resisting. The expansion will likely be written into the Senate version of the bill reauthorizing the main federal education programs.

It is a good idea. Yes, if it works as intended it will increase the pressure on a lot of schools. But what barm does that do? The testing program so far has not so much imposed a national curriculum as reflected the one that implicitly exists. Most school systems have similar goals. The idea here is to measure better bow they live up in them. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Colonels Had Democracy in Their Gun Sights

By Amando Doronila

MANILA -- The failed "colonels" coup" against the government of President Corazon Aquino has plunged the Philippines into a crisis over the role of the military in politics. How Mrs. Aquino handles the affair may well determine whether her administration collapses, bringing down with it the whole edifice of constituuonal democracy she has restored since Ferdinand Marcos was forced from power in February 1986. Although military forces loyal to the government thwarted the Aug. 28 coup attempt, which was led by Colonel Gregorio Honasan, further military plots cannot be ruled out. There had been four previous military conspiracies against the Aquino administration, but this was the most serious challenge, and the bloodiest. The civil government and loyalist forces hit back hard at the rebels. But

Aquino's attempts to bring a demo-cratic political system back to the middle-rank officers, mainly from the ippines have said that they are ready

Philippines is built on shaky founda-tions. The coup revealed widespread unrest within the armed forces and exacerbated tensions between men in uniform and the civil government. Some of these tensions arose from efforts by the Aquino administration to reform the military, which became enmeshed in politics during the long rule of President Marcos.

The rebel attacks co the presidential palace, where Mrs. Aquino was sleeping, and on the armed forces general headquarters did not aim solely to seize the centers of power. Philippine Military Academy, the na-tion's premier officer training school - were inspired by a dangerous, antidemocratic ideology. This ideology maintains that the armed forces have a right to intervene in politics and seize power if, in their view, liberal democracy has failed the nation. Support for this notion appears to be widespread within the officer corps.

In a manifesto, organizers of the coup attempt said that they had acted to "save the nation" from corruption and political excesses. They also denounced what they called the "soft" approach of the Aquino government in dealing with Communist insurgents. What is worrying is that since the coup, the Communist-led New People's Army has stepped up

The fragmentation of central authority has impaired the capacity of the Aquino administration to enforce public order and combat insurgency. The political center in the Philippines, made up of moderates who gave overwhelming support to the government in a constituticoal referendum and congressional elections earlier this year, is now under siege from extremists of the left and the right, who use violence to achieve their ends. There is serious doubt that the government can protect the center against the assault on a constitutional democratic order.

London Through Foreign Eyes

TONDON -- "The Image of London" as seen by foreigners is one of those exhibitions that make one wonder why they were not done before.

The show, at the Barbican through Oct. 18, is small, but it has a perfect mix: history from an unusual angle, the human element, pictures and drawings unknown to all but archivists - even a handful of very beautiful works of art. There is only one thing slightly wrong: The title can be misleading. The lure of the show lies not in "the image." but in the succeeding images that differed vastly through the ages. The earliest of them, of a place now gone forever, are like an invitation to travel through a city revisited in a dream.

The very first graphic work relating to London from the band of a traveler is a set of 14 sheets of paper which, when fitted together, pro-vide a so-called "long view" of the metropolis from Westminster to metropolis from Westminster to built structures five or six stories Greenwich. Anthonis van den high. London is seen from the the era of European classicism, Italian style - Canaletto and other Venetian painters were called in to record the new monuments in an equally Italian manner. This resulted in some of the most stilted picture postcards of European art. But good or bad, they are irre-

- literally so: one went there to galleries running along the walls, must have been an astonishing sight, if one bordering on screaming vuigarity.

Other pictures by Canaletto, done with uninspired meticulous care - for which we must be grateful - preserve for us the memory of the buildings lining the river from Lambeth to Greenwich that were demolished many decades ago. The Italianate era in turn gave way to the 19th-century image, harsh on the eye as the city was harsh to its people. Misery and poverty were so striking that they became a theme graphically chroni-cled by the foreign engravers -Géricault, among others - as it was by Dickens in prose.

most powerful empire in the world, not unlike the New York of today. As a source of artistic inspiration, the new London did not amount to much until the advent of Impressionism. To these we owe some of the most beautiful works in the show. They wrapped it up in gray fogs, purple bazes and golden mists. Monet's virtually unknown picture of 1903 from the Denver Art Museum is, as its otle apply says, a study of "A Light Effect on the Thames."

A small group of pictures by An-dre Derain, who came to London at the beight of his great period, the Fauve years, provides an admirable conclusion to the sbow. "The Thames and Tower Bridge" is a complete surprise sent by the bitle known Fridart Foundation. This is a masterpiece in color effects with red and black trawlers on a groen and orange river. Fed Seeks Route to Check Inflation, Defend the Dollar

By LEONARD SILK New York Times Service

EW YORK - Climbing interest rates, triggered by the declining dollar and worries about mounting inflation, have soured the mood on Wall Street. Some analysts have even started to write obimaries for the big bull market of the past five years. "I don't think this is temporary," said Sung Wohn Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp., the Minneapolis-based bank holding company. "I certainly think we're in a bear market."

Needing to defend the dollar and check inflation while keeping the expansion going, the Federal Reserve, under its uew chair-man. Alan Greenspan, is up against a tricky problem: If it does too little to tighten money and credit, it could fan inflationary expectations; but if it does too much sending interest rates up sharply, it could put the securities markets and the economy into a nose dive. On Friday, the Fed tightened credit a notch, increasing the discount rate one-half point to dollar investments have intensified.

Worries about a

A steep drop in the U.S. securities markets and a fall in the economy, hurring the outlook for corporate profits, could cause foreign investors to cut their holdings of American equities, bonds and other assets. Not only would this be bad news for the markets but also it would mean a severe insufficiency in the savings needed to finance the federal budget deficit and the trade deficit. This would mean another downward shove in the value of the dollar and another upward twist in interest rates.

It will do no good to try to minimize the danger of the growing U.S. dependency on foreign capital. Earlier this year, before he became Fed chairman, Mr. Greenspan warned his clients of the danger of a slackening of foreign investment in U.S. assets, which appeared to be taking place in the first quarter. But the foreign capital inflow picked up again in the second quarter, bolstering the stock market, even as the Fed has gradually tightened money, sending interest rates higher.

newed dollar depreciation, if they cause foreign investors to cut their holdings, could have "a very adverse effect on share prices" because foreign capital has played a major role in pushing up the price-earnings ratios of American stocks in the face of rising bond yields this year.

Foreign investors, according to Mr. Hale, have been expected to purchase more than $40 billion in American equities this year, compared with $18 billion last year and only $3 billion to $4 billion a year during the early 1980s. He pots the current U.S. price earnings ratio at 17, which appears expensive in relation to Treasury bond yields of more than 9 percent, but he maintains that this is not expensive compared with Japan's P/E ratios of 60 and bond yields of 5 percent.

"But not even the Japanese will be able to sustain U.S. equity multiples at high levels if inflation expectations rise sharply and U.S. bond yields rise into double-digit territory," Mr. Hale said. The anxieties about inflation and the dollar seem bound to dominate Fed policy now. Tightening of money runs the risk of slowing the economy, but the risks of failing to defend the dollar and head off inflation would probably be much bigger. In driving foreign capital out of the country, the upward wreach to interest

Bond Bids For U.S. Brewer

Australian Offers To Buy Heileman

Reuters SYDNEY --- Alan Bond, the australian businessman, made a $1.2-billion bid Friday for G. Heileman Brewing Co. of Wisconsin, the world's sixth-largest brewer, Bond Corp. Holdings Ltd. of-fered $38 a share for all of Heileman's shares through a subsidiary, Amber Acquisition Corp.

Heileman's share price rose $8.375 to $42.25 in New York tradforeign pullback from ing Friday. It was the most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange.

Bond Corp. absorbed Pittsburgh Brewing Co. in 1986 and Austra-lia's Swan and Fourex brands. Heileman is the fourth-larges brewer in the United States and sixth in the world in terms of the amount of beer sold. It produces the Lone Star, Colt 45 and Rainier brands.

In a letter to Heileman's chairman, Russel Cleary, Mr. Bond asked Heileman's management to join in creating a partnership with Bond that would be a major brewing force worldwide.

Together Bond Brewing and Heileman would be the fourth-largest brewer in the world, enabling it to exploit markets beyond either of our own reaches," the letter said. Bond Corp. last month reported a 117.72 million Australian dollar

($85 million) annual profit on sales of almost $1.8 billion, with brewing making the largest contribution. Bond Corp. said in a statement that the offer by Amber would ex-pire at midnight New York time on Friday, Oct. 2, unless extended. The company said the money for the offer would come from its own funds, a bank facility of up to $700 million and up to $450 million to be provided by Salomoo Brothers Holding Co. Inc. It said the offer was conditional upon 75 percent acceptances and the redemption or invalidation of the company's preferred stock pur-chase rights. The statement said the proposed acquisition of Heileman continued the global expansioo into brewing of Bond Corp., whose interests also include television and oil. In its first reaction, Heileman asked its stockholders oot to agree to the Bond bid and said it would respond to the offer by Sept. 18

Molten steel being poured at a Nucor plant.

A Mini-Mill Tweaks U.S. Steel Giants

By Jonathan P. Hicks New York Times Service NEW YORK — Although Nucor Corp.'s $225 million mill in central Indiana is not due to open. for two years, the U.S. steel industry is scrambling to assess the odds that the high-risk experiment will succeed.

The balance of power in the industry has always been distinct: The big companies that make steel from scratch manufacture the high-quality, flat-rolled products used in automobiles and appliances. The smaller, so-called mini-mill company which make steel largely from scrap metal, produce the lower-grade products, such as bars and bolts used in construction.

bolts used in construction. Nucor, the largest U.S. mini-mill company, is increasingly viewed as threatening that balance with its new $225 million mill. The company, based in Charlotte, North Carolina, plans to use technology that it hopes will enable the mill to make high-quality, flat-rolled steel at a lower cost than anyone else. If Nucor succeeds, it will fundamentally alter the economics of producing steel.

The large, financially troubled steelmakers view the new process as a potentially crippling threat to their exclusive hold on the flat-rolled market, the largest and most profitable sector of the industry. And the mini-mill companies, which have seen the demand for many of their traditional products stagnate, hope to follow Nucor's lead if its new mill succeeds. The project also could spur entrepreocurs in this country to form new ventures, possibly with foreign steelmakers. The technology that will be employed at the Nucor mill in Crawfordsville, Indiana, is already being hailed as a breakthrough. The plant's main feature will be an advanced caster developed by SMS Schloemann-Siemag AG of West Germany that is designed to pour molten steel into much thinner slabs than current casters can produce. Its slabs will be two inches (5.1 centimeters) thick, compared with 10 inches for conventional casters.

The slabs are used to make steel sheets one-tenth of an inch thick. Because Nucor's slabs will theoretically be so much thinner than those of other companies, the sheets can be produced from the slabs with much less energy, manpower and wasted material Indeed, Nucor believes that five workers will be able to do what it now takes more than 30 workers to do at most other steel companies. The mill, whose work force will be nonunion like those at

Nucor's four existing plants, thus could have the lowest-cost flat-rolled operation in the United Nucor hopes to be able eventually to make high-uality hot-band sheets, the industry mainstay, for about $280 a ton. That is significantly less than the approximately $350 a ton that analysts say it costs big companies, such as USX Corp. and Bethlehem Steel Corp., to make the hot-band sheets.

"This is an extremely significant development for the industry and something that everyone in the steel business is watching closely," said the Reverend William T. Hogan, a steel industry histo-tion and explored of account of the Cordbart Unirian and professor of economics at Fordham University in New York, "For the large integrated companies, it is a matter of concern because it has the likelihood of making inroads into their territo-TY.

At first, the Nucor plant will be capable of producing just 800,000 tons a year of sheet steel, roughly 2 percent of what the big steel companies manufactured in 1986.

The plant will use scrap steel, from which it is difficult to make the superior-quality sheet pro-duced by the big, integrated steelmakers. The big manufacturers make their steel from basic raw materials: iron ore, coke, and limestone.

While acknowledging that the process would confine the plant, at least initially, to making sheets for such lower-priced, lower-grade products as oil drums, siding and decking, F. Kenneth lverson, Nucor's chairman, has higher ambitions. Mr. Iverson has his eye on the more lucrative automobile and appliance markets, which use nearly half of the steel produced in the United States. "It will have a big impact," he said of the new mill.

By upgrading the quality and range of their products over the years, the mini-mill companies, See STEEL, Page 11

day allowing the government to sell its 34.5 percent stake in Ja-pan Airlines. The stake is worth about 745 billion yen ($5.3 biltion at current exchange rates).

The upper house of parliament lifted the last obstacle to the complete privatization of the national flag carrier, which ranks as the second-biggest cargo and passenger airline in the world after the Soviet Union's Acroflot. The deregulation of air transport is part of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's privatization program, which has al-ready included public offerings of shares in Japan's railway and telecommunications networks.

Brierley Investments Offers To Buy All of Equity & Law

LONDON - Brierley Investments Ltd. of New Zealand said Friday it is offering 365 pence ($6.05) a share for all ordinary shares outstanding of Equity & Law PLC, valuing the British life insurance company at about £367 million.

IEP Securities Ltd., a member of the BIL group, already owns 29.6

percent of Equity & Law's ordinary shares. Brierley said it believes it can improve investment performance for policyholders of Equity & Law, which will ultimately be reflected in increased capital values. The acquisition will closely complement Brierley's worldwide activities and would add strength to both companies, Brierley said.

Brierley said it does not envisage any change in Equity & Law's management or operational structure should the bid succeed. The company intends to operate Equity & Law as a separate business within the BIL group, while maintaining management continuity. Equity & Law shares jumped 39 pence to 389 pence following the announcement, well above the price Brierley is offering, which Brierley said represented a premium of 4.3 percent over market value. The premium over the offer indicates investors believe a higher offer might be made.

Brierley said the offer was on condition the proposed acquisition was not referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mr. Iverson pointed out that "the big integrated companies are not precluded from doing this, too." But most of them are heavily burdened with debt, much of a incurred from the construction of continuous casters that heretofore were the state-of-the-art way to make steel.

"The integrated companies just can't afford to do this," said John Jacobson, a steel analyst at Wharton Econometrics, referring to the new technology. "What's at stake here is the survival of the traditional integrated companies."

NEW YORK - The dollar closed higher Friday but with bearsh sentiment intact after half-point increases in the Federal Reserve's discount rate and U.S. commercial binks' prime lending rates gave it only a modest boost, dealers said. Traders said the dollar's reaction Hid not angur well for next week.

Anticipation of a U.S. trade report at the end of next week, they said, would help create caution over the dollar's prospects.

"ON A SHORE beaten by desolate waves HE stood" Pushkin had oo need to ex-plain who, in the opening lines of "The Bronze Horseman," HE was. For the educated 19th-century Russian, the effects of HIS reign were everywhere. The historian, M.P. Pogodin, wrote in 1841:

"We wake up. What day is it? - Peter the Great ordered us to count the months from January, the years from the birth of Christ. "It is time to dress — our clothes derive from fashions established by Peter the Great, made in factories which be devised, from wool shorn from the sheep which be introduced into Russia.

"Our oewspapers are brought in - Peter the Great established them, and the script superseding the Old Slavonic was designed by him: be cut out the letters with his own hands.

"Let us go to the University -- secular education was founded by Peter the Great.

to his General Reglement." The Russian state when Peter I assumed the crown was a pitiful object. Land-locked but for the arctic port of Arkhangelsk - ice-free only three or four months of the year - and bordered by a cordon of hostile powers, Sweden, Livonia, Poland, and the Ottoman Empire, all of whom were deter-mined to keep it isolated and exploitable, Russia was effectively denied commerce both material and intellectual with the rest of Europe. The Renais-sance, with the scientific and technical advances which stemmed from it, had passed it by: Culturally it was no more than a decayed relic of past medieval splendor. Its political institutions were still weak-ened by two and a balf centuries of Tatar satrapy: Political cootrol was effected by fire, ax and the torture chamber, and was exercised by the boyars who grouped themselves about the persoo of whichever member of the Romanov dynasty - itself a the Pruth and the Dniester, the Baltic coastline from Vyborg in Finland to Riga in Latvia was firmly and irrevocably under Russian cootrol, while Russian fleets roamed the Baltic and Gulf of Bothnia at will. The military might of Sweden's Charles XII and his Livonian allies lay brokeo by Russian arms, the Kindom of Poland was in terminal decline and the Ottoman Empire was in retreat.

Russian opinioo regarding Peter I's achievements has been divided - and oot only along "European" or Slavophile lines. To the scientist-poet Lomonosov ("He was your God, he is your God, O Rus-sia!"), as to most historians of the Stalin era, he was a genius without failings. The father of Russian historians, Pushkin's friend and mentor, N.M. Karamzin, was oot so sure. Io 1817, be wrote of the oew "intelligentsia": "We have become citizens of the world, but in some respects we have ceased to be Russian citizens. That is the legacy of Peter 1."

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches DETROIT - Wait Terrell, supported by basesempty home runs from Lou Whitaker and Kirk Gibon, pitched a six-hitter Thursday night as the Detroit Tigers beat the Cleveland Indians, 3-1 The Tigers' 21st triumph in their last 29 games upped their first-place lead over the idle Toronto Blue Jays to 14 games in the American Leagne's East Division. Terrell raised his record at Tiger Stadium this year to 1-2, with a 2.30 carned-run average, while on the road

"He's able to keep the ball away from left-handed hitters," said the Indians' manager, Doc Edwards. "You hit a lot of balls to center field, where they've got Chet Lemon. You've got to hit it out of the park in center field to get it over Lemon's head here, and that's 440 feet away. Everything else, Lemon catches." But the Tigers' manager, Sparky Anderson, said that Terrell had been successful by getting batters to his ground outs. "That's 13 outs that never left the infield," Ander-sas said. "How many pop ups did he get? (Four.) And how many strikeouts? (Four). So that's 21 outs the ball never left the infield. If only six balls get out of your infield, you've got a beckuva chance to win a game." Said Terrell: "Twe pitched some very good games on the road and got no-decisions." He was "tired," he said, "of hearing I pitched terrible on the road." He lost his shutout in the eighth inning when, with one out, Andy Allanson and Brett Butler singled, pinch-hitter Brook Jacoby walked to load the bases and Julio Franco's sacrifice fly scored Allanson. Rich Yett of the Indians gave up both home runs on 3-2 pitches as the Tigers scored three times in the third. Whitaker led off the inning with his homer and Gib-son belted his one out later. Then Alan Trammell, who MOTHER went four for-four, doubled and scored on Darrell Evans's hard single to right. Twins 2, Red Sox 1: In Minneapolis, Al Newman thew a third straight walk off Boston's Wes Gardner with one out in the bottom of the 10th, forcing in Gene arkin with the winning run. The game was scoreless until the ninth, when Ed

o put Boston ahead with a sacrifice fly and Kirby Puckett homered with two out in the bottom of ing. Larkin doubled with one out in the 10th, then Randy Bush was intentionally walked and pinch-hitter Roy Smalley also walked, to load the bases. Brewers 8, Royals 2: In Kansas City, Missouri, Greg Brock went four for five with three run-scoring singles and scored three times to help Milwankee sweep the three-game series. Chris Bosio, who pitched a two-hitter against the Twins in his last start, held the Royals to four bits while striking out seven in seven innings, and Mark Gubicza lost his sixth straight start.

White Sox 5, Rangers 2: In Chicago, Floyd Bannister, although allowing Texas eight hits in 74 innings, struck out a season-high nine. (UPI, AP) Actros' Hatcher Suspended for 10 Days

Thompson had dropped back to eighth after four events, but rallied to third even though his 400 time of 48.61 seconds was below his standard. The 400 was held during a thunderstorm Friday that flooded the track.

Thompson also had sub-par performances of 49-64 in the shot put. 6-7 in the high jump and 24-84 in the long jump.

Jurgen Hingsen of West Germaby, the perennial runner-up to Thompson over the years, dropped out of the competition with an injured knee after failing to clear a height in the high jump. He had a cracked rib earlier in the season.

The other decathion event winners were Rob Muzzio of the United States ia the shot put, 54-74, Christian Schenk of East Germany in the high jump, 7-4%, and Alain Blondel of France in the 400 melers, 47.91.

NEW YORK - In a minor league baseball game in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, the other night, the catcher threw wildly into left field in what appeared to be an attempt to pick a runner off third base. When the runner reached home he was surprised, as was the umpire, that the catcher still had the ball and tagged him out, The numer and the umpire were surprised for good reason. They thought that the thing thrown by the catcher, and still being retrieved by the outfielders, was the ball in the game. It turned out to be only the potato in the game. A white potato, as it were, which had been peeled by the catcher, Dave Bresnahan of the Williamsport Bills, a Cleveland Indians team in the Class AA Eastern League, uncle, Roger Bresnahan, the Hall of Fame catcher for the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs, among others, in the early years of this century. It was great-uncle Bresnahan who introduced shin guards in 1907, and who, following a severe beaning, is credited with being the first to experiment with a batting belmet.

"I guess ingenuity is in the Bresnahan blood lines," said Scott.

"All I knew about my great uncle," said Dave Bresnahan, "is that he was called the Duke of Tralee - that's in County Kerry where my grandparents are from — and he used to catch Christy Mathewson."

Bresnahan said he couldn't believe that he would be released for this. As for the fine, he said, his teammates wanted to pay it for him. What he did the next day was come to the park with a sack of 50 potatoes and a note pinned to it and put it on the desk of his manager, Orlando Gomez, who had removed Bresnahan from the

It has been the site of numerous incidents of vandalism and mischief, even with a lightkeeper in residence. "We have the same oblems here as in other places," said the lightkeeper. Mac Rouse. "A few of the young people have a few beers and then they start van-Moon. The residents estimate that moving the lightkeeper out of the lighthouse would mean a reduction of $50,000 in salaries and services in the town. People also like thinking about the romance of a gray-bearded lightkeeper climbing the lighthouse stairs to light a beacon for lonely sailors. They like remembering the days when lightkeepers rowed boats out to sailors in trouble. Those days are past, said Arbogast. Current technology — photo-electric cells to turn the light off and on and radio sensors to sense fog --- makes the expense of a lightkeeper unjustifiable, he said. Arbogast said it is unlikely that Lubec residents will have much effect on the Coast Guard's plans, Several organizations have expressed preliminary interest in using the keeper's house, including the Maine Department of Parks and Recreation, the Maine Marine Resources Department and the New England Aquarium, Arbogast said. Parks and Recreation would like to house the manager of the adjacent Quoddy Head State Park, which is open from May 30 to Oct. Babcock said he has heard of the interest of the agencies, hut none

The show is planned as the first in a series of productions that would hring American directors to work with the best of China's stage performers, and, eventually, she hopes to establish a foundation to support the project.

At the emhassy, meanwhile, some American officials and their wives have complained privately that during her two years at the embassy here Lord sometimes has acted as though she, and not her husband, were the ambassador, and that she gets her way all too often,

Still, the prevailing view ap-pears to be that, if her high-profile style offends a few people, the result is worth it. As a member of a visiting congressional staff delegation put it recently, "A lot of Chinese think they can fool the conditions, of those who make do by living with parents, sharing tight space with friends or moving among borrowed apartments. One of her friends, the singer Wang Yanyan, may have the talent to become an international star but, Lord said, she was able to get her own housing just this year. "I don't know how they can think when they're living sometimes four to a room, but they do Some writers can only work after everyone else - wife, mother, father, child - goes to bed."

Lord blames China's long isolation from much foreign literature and domestic restrictions placed on writers for the country's failure to produce a conternporary world-class writer. "The Chinese are so proud of their Olympic gold medals." she said. "But where are the gold medals for writing, or for painting?"

Earlier this year, the Commu nist Party launched a propaganda offensive against Western democratic ideas and influences and tightened its controls over pubshing, putting an end to a relatively open at mosphere of debate. Since then, at least seven intellectuals have been ousted from the party and several journals have been shut down.

It has not been a good year for the friends of Bette Lord. Some intellectuals have been intimidated and are lying low; some have put their best work on hold, or stashed it in drawers waiting for a brighter day. For writers in this society who test the outer limits, the chilling effect is deep," Lord said. "It pains me to think of the untapped talent, the books that haven't been written, the paintings that haven't been painted, the manuscripts stored away, the loss of momentum.

A few writers are able to speak mockingly of their predicament. Lord said she has heard more than one lament, with a characteristically Chinese shrug: "I have the freedom to write whatthe freedom to publish.
